Every vacation, Aarav visited his grandparents' village, surrounded by green hills and thick forests. He loved exploring nature and listening to the songs of birds. The peaceful atmosphere was very different from the busy city where he lived.
One morning, while walking with his friend Riya, Aarav heard the sound of rushing water. Curious, they followed the narrow trail until they discovered a beautiful waterfall hidden behind tall rocks. Sunlight reflected on the water, creating sparkling colours. Butterflies danced around colourful flowers, making the place look magical.
When they shared their discovery with the villagers, they learned that a company planned to build a factory nearby. The factory would pollute the stream and destroy the forest around the waterfall.
Aarav and Riya decided to act. They prepared colourful posters, spoke to the villagers, and collected signatures to protect the area. They also requested the local authorities to declare the place a protected nature park.
After several weeks, the authorities accepted their request. The factory was shifted to another location, and the waterfall remained safe. Aarav smiled as he watched the clear water flow freely, knowing that even young people could make a difference.
